

ESAC

turning environmental research into action

What is ESAC?

ESAC is a national organization that brings together environmental scholars and professionals from the public, private and non-profit sectors. ESAC was formed to further research and teaching in the environmental field, and to facilitate communication amongst its members.

Building Bridges

ESAC is helping to establish environmental studies as a discipline that builds bridges between academia and other communities. ESAC members are doing environmental research that is crucial and cutting-edge; covering a broad array of research areas - from the scientific to the esoteric; from the political to the spiritual.

Membership Benefits

ESAC offers many tools for encouraging communication: a membership directory, regular newsletters, an email discussion group, and an annual national conference that offers an opportunity for members to socialize, debate, and present their research. Members of ESAC also receive a subscription to Alternatives.
